

Certificate for international transport worker

To be used by workers in transport for border controls at internal borders when reintroduced due to public health consideration

The certificate may be used by any person who is working on board a means of transport carrying goods or passengers, in particular the driver; by any person who is moving to the place where the means of transport on which he/she will start working is situated; or by any other person working in the transport sector <sup>(1)</sup>.

For the purpose of crossing the internal borders of the Union, the holder of the certificate shall be deemed to be an international transport worker.

The certificate shall be duly signed by the employer where the worker is an employee of a transport undertaking, or by the worker in his/her capacity of manager of the transport undertaking where he/she is self-employed.

The certificate shall be recognized at the border control as valid evidence that the person is an international transport worker.

Transport workers using the certificate (model below) should be not requested to produce any other document other than their personal identification to provide evidence that they are an international transport worker for the purpose of border control at internal borders of the Union.

When controls at internal borders are lifted, transport workers should only be required to produce documents which are provided for by EU legislation to carry out their activity.

The electronic or printed version of the certificate should be deemed sufficient.

(1) Airline pilots and aircrew members, and seafarers, are covered by points 5.2 and 5.3 of the Handbook
